Governor Celebrates Earth Day at The Sustainability Park™

In celebration of Earth Day, former Virginia Governor, Mark Warner, visited The Sustainability Park™ in Chester, Virginia. Brenda Robinson, President of Environmental Solutions, Inc. and Founder of The Sustainability Park™, welcomed the Governor and encouraged him to meet tenants of The Park to learn first-hand the economic and environmental significance of Park operations.

During his visit, Governor Warner addressed the assembled group of Park tenants and County and Economic Development representatives. In brief remarks, Governor Warner described the environmental sector as “the growth industry” in the coming years, saying that it will be “as widespread as the telecommunications and IT sectors” have been in recent years. Robinson went on to say, “We are honored that Governor Warner chose to visit The Sustainability Park™ on Earth Day. His visit was important – it gave us the opportunity to showcase renewable and sustainable products being manufactured at The Park, as well as how we have adapted a former manufacturing facility to once again be a productive contributor to the Virginia, MidAtlantic, and National economies.” In addition to existing tenants, Governor Warner met with several representatives from potential Park tenants that will add to the momentous growth The Park has achieved in only sixteen months.

Warner stated that The Sustainability Park is at the forefront of the new economic effort and will set an example to be duplicated on a National level. The Governor’s visit culminated with the planting of a white dogwood, the Virginia state flower, at The Park.
